Midwest Teachers Institute
Teachers Helping Teachers

Since 2010, Midwest Teachers Institute has been a national leader in K-12 professional development, providing schools and educators across America, Canada and the Department of Defense with high quality, research driven, and classroom applicable professional development graduate courses.

Our online self-paced courses are designed for individual, group, or whole school use. We developed our PD-Personalized courses to connect course material to real-world practice and classroom practicality. They address the most relevant topics facing schools and educators today. In addition, our courses are university approved, graduate level and mobile-friendly, which makes it easy and convenient to continue your professional learning anytime and anywhere.

PD-Personalized courses are designed to meet your school's needs and encourage collaboration with colleagues.

As a school leader or director, you choose which courses are important to your school and your staff, and which topics fit best in your department, school, or district.

How Our PD-Personalized Courses Can Help Your School or District

Researchers have documented over 150 influences on learning, with a range of effects operating as catalysts for positive change in the classroom. Ultimately, our entire PD-Personalized course curriculum is connected to improving instruction, and a belief that professional development should always be directly related to the classroom. We base our approach to planning and building course offerings on classroom and school needs, trends in education, and continual feedback from teachers and administrators - regularly updating our existing catalog and developing new courses.
